

Chart Abstraction

Many of today's health systems are implementing new EHRs as well as other clinical software. Frequently, this means patient data will require conversion into the new software system either from existing legacy systems or paper charts. One of the most formidable tasks in this process is the transition of shelves of patient records stored on paper to the electronic system. This time-consuming effort presents a challenge to organizations with limited staff often having more work than enough staff to fully address the project.

MMY's Chart Abstraction service provides a flexible, custom resources solution designed to help clients convert patient data housed in legacy systems or on paper charts with minimal disruption to day to day operations. Our team carefully reviews each customer's situation to provide a recommendation of the most appropriate staffing levels and expertise needed to effectively convert the data. This allows physicians and specialty practices to choose the critical patient information needed for an optimal continuum of care.
