

Optimization and Workflow Assessments

Many of today's health systems are implementing new EHR or ERP systems as well as other software that make up the complete suite of offerings. You can follow the vendor's path, replace like for like, or take advantage of the new system's capabilities. Change is not easy, we have worked with many clients for that organizational transformation in order to prepare them for the changes.

Focusing on optimization, all the bells and whistles are exciting and those are the things that grab everyone's attention. Some optimization efforts are straightforward, maybe it is new functionality and there is no need to "learn" a new way to do something. What if new functionality is replacing something that has been done for years the same way? In both cases, optimization events require workflow review and assessments. Understanding the changes and the requirements of those impacted will go a long way to acceptance and speed the adaption process.
